CofC in Costa Rica
COMMUNICATION
SPRING BREAK 2020
March 14- March 20
PROGRAM FEE- $2,100*

*(Subject to change & does not include tuition or airfare)
Students will take the following course:

COMM 215: Communication Identity Community (3 credits)

This will be a hands on academic experience for students who are ready to learn beyond classroom walls. This class has a comparative culture lines. During the study abroad experience, we will hike to the Cabecar village, whose people are an indigenous group residing in eight protected territories in Costa Rica. This plus meeting with other families during our stay will teach us about culture, family, perception, and social construction. The outdoor activities (e.g. white water rafting in the Rio Pacuare) will put small group communication and efficacy based theory to the test. In visiting a chocolate farm we will learn what pure chocolate is and how different it is from the processed chocolate-which actually contains very little cocoa- that we get in the United States. Through this experience, we can discuss branding, marketing, advertising, and food communication. This program is one part of a full semester class.
